"BIOHAZARD!!"

Yet another destructive pest works its way down from Queensland.....

Yes, it's the "schoolie" (hominid puerilis) originally introduced to the Gold Coast to combat falling rentals. Now, distribution of this new biohazard extends as far south as Byron Bay!

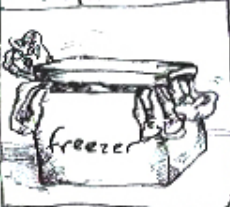

Identification: Always travels in packs. Mating calls = male: loud grating "oi oi oi". Female: irritating high pitched shriek.....

Nesting: Prefer sloppily managed holiday rentals. Nests are lined with old takeaway pizza cartons, empty stubbies and vomit.

Suggested methods of eradication: Probably the most humane method is to put the schoolie in a plastic bag and place in the freezer.

Another popular method is to whack the schoolie with a golf club....

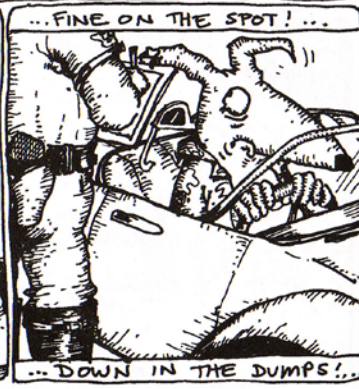

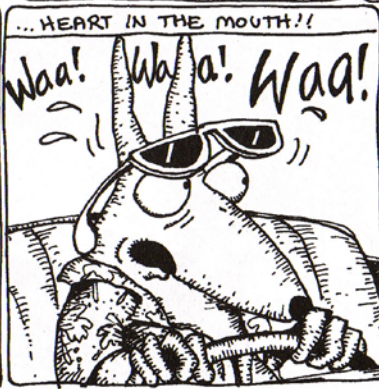

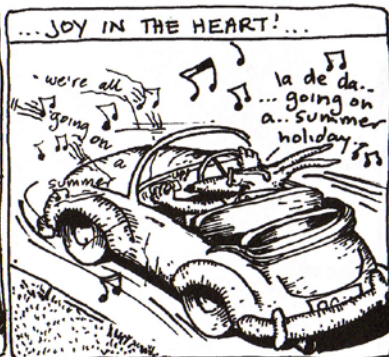

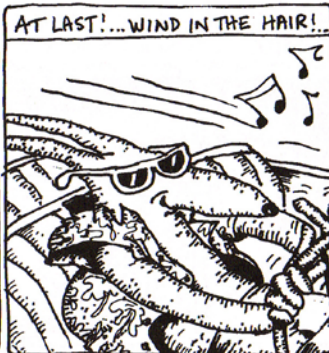

Lastly, pouring Dettol over their pimply skin has been known to be very effective....

JASON IN THE TOWN

M...
East of Everything
"JUST SOUTH OF BRISBANE"
Episode 1....
"Where have all the flowerchildren gone?"

Jason, the prodigal cultural anthropologist, returns to Byron to find the place awash with fatted calves, golden calves, squealing porkers and a surprisingly large population of LITTLE NAPOLEONS!

It didn't take Jason long to get back into his old ways, and soon a gentle-fug of self-absorbed complacency settled comfortably on his shoulders....

Unsurprisingly Jason met people on the beach who thought the same way he did. They all agreed they lived in the best of all possible worlds...

Despite, or perhaps because of being located on the leylines between Mount Warning and the Lighthouse, hardly anyone actually lived in the town anymore...

"Los Desaparecidos"

Jason goes in search of the lost folk of Byron Bay.

Jason was hot on the trail!

Yes! Jason had discovered a mass grave of flowerchildren, hippies and alternative thinkers deep in the heart of what was left of the Cumbebin Swamp!

The vision was extraordinary! In a flash, Jason knew the answer!

What this town needs
is another festival!

Next Week:
Byron's very own
Day of the Dead!

"JUST SOUTH of BRISBANE"

Episode 3

"Day of the Dead"

Jason's celebration of the mass extinction of local residents with a Day of the Dead festival was so successful, he knew that what the town really needed was several Day of the Dead festivals, to be known collectively as 'Dead Set' - a quaint expression once used by the town's early settlers

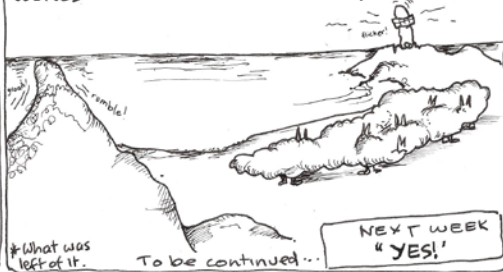

Mount Warning groaned and the Lighthouse beacon flickered, but there was no stopping self-interest clothed in clichés of community benefit.

This'll put Byron on the map!

Could any more festivals be squeezed into the Gregorian calendar? Could more wolves thunder down on the fold?*

*What was left of it.

"YES!"

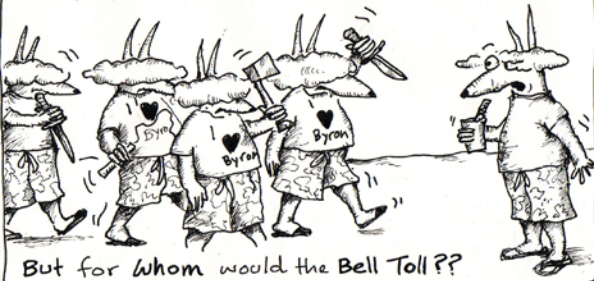

JASON SANTA

"JUST SOUTH of BRISBANE"

Episode 4

"YES".... because no man is an Island!! (So sorry Mr Donne!)

To justify having more Day of the Dead Festivals, more people had to die..

Perhaps some clods would be washed away by the Sea....

Does the Loss of a few Clods diminish me?(or my bank account?)

And so, as the seas rise, the tides of human flesh turn into tsunamis, and the bell tolls for thee and me, the biggest and possibly the last festival was held - "The Killing of the Goose that Laid the Golden Egg"
